

ILLUSTRATION BY RAJ VERMA

cates that companies with CFO-driven global strategies tend to achieve stronger returns, with up to 20% higher returns on investment (ROI) on cross-border investments compared to peers. This reinforces the value of involving the CFO directly in international strategy and execution.

CFOs will likely continue strengthening their strategic focus, investing in digital capabilities, fostering collaboration across business functions, and developing finance teams equipped to manage emerging challenges. Their evolving role places them at the centre of organisational decision-making, making them critical to building resilient, future-ready enterprises.

As organisations navigate an environment shaped by shifting market conditions and technological change, empowering CFOs to lead across these domains will be essential to unlocking long-term value and maintaining competitive strength. BT

Views are personal