

IWC SCHAFFHAUSEN BIG PILOT'S WATCH PERPETUAL CALENDAR CERALUME

The IWC Big Pilot's Watch Perpetual Calendar Ceralume represents one of IWC Schaffhausen's most striking material innovations. Limited to 250 pieces, the 46.5 mm watch introduces Ceralume—a proprietary luminous ceramic combining ceramic powder with Super-LumiNova pigments—allowing the entire case to glow. Paired with a white luminous dial and rubber strap, it shifts from monochrome tones by day to an intense blue glow at night. Inside, the Calibre 52616 with Pellaton winding provides a seven-day power reserve. The material absorbs light like a battery, re-emitting it indefinitely for a dramatic visual transformation.

BULGARI SERPENTI AETERNA

Last year, when the Bulgari Serpenti Aeterna debuted at Watches & Wonders, it appeared relatively restrained within Bulgari's iconic snake-inspired line. The newest editions, however, embrace maximalism. The rose-gold model is richly set with 122 coloured gemstones—emeralds, sapphires, tourmalines—alongside 493 diamonds, forming a vivid, kaleidoscopic design. Crafting it required 225 hours, with 185 hours devoted to just stone selection and several hours spent on setting. The yellow-gold version opts for diamond brilliance with a mother-of-pearl dial. Since 1948, the Serpenti has embodied innovation, and this reinterpretation, featuring a sleek bangle replacing the Tubogas bracelet, continues that legacy.
