

Whenever meteorites have fallen on earth, they have been known to create destruction. We'll show you one that created heaven.

Since ages, meteorites have always been associated with destruction and devastation. They have always fascinated us, and at the same time, created fear in our minds. So brutal were they that, millions of years ago, one such meteorite wiped out the entire species of dinosaurs from the face of the earth, resulting in the end of the Cretaceous period. But how many of us know that there once was a meteor that was actually responsible for creating heaven on earth.

The story goes back hundreds of years when a great big chunk of meteor hurtled down and struck the earth somewhere near Aurangabad. This gigantic meteor, nearly a kilometer in diameter, hit the earth with such immense force that it created a depression, almost 1.8 km in diameter. A crater that's now known as the famous Lonar Crater. One look at this wonder of nature and your mind refuses to believe that something as vicious as a meteor could have created it. Today, the Lonar Crater has become the object of fascination of tourists and researchers alike. Situated on the outskirts of Lonar town in

Buldhana district in Maharashtra, it is recognized as the world's oldest crater and the only crater in the world created by hypervelocity meteoric impact on basaltic rock. But the enchanting beauty of this place doesn't end here. Just take a trek to the top of the crater and you'll see a beautiful green depression, perfectly circular and 1.8 km in diameter, nestled right in the middle of a vast plain of picturesque parched fields and inviting river beds. At the bottom of this enormously large bowl lies a tranquil emerald lake; the third largest salt-water lake in the world.

All in all, it's something that has to be seen to be believed.

So leave those hectic schedules, rush hour traffic and stressful deadlines behind and come to a land that takes you miles away from the maddening rush. Slow down, take a break, experience heaven.

MAHARASHTRA

unlimited

Incredible India

