

"NEHRU BOWS BEFORE FORCE, BUT NOT BEFORE REASON."

Shyama Prasad Mookerjee

Founder of the Bharatiya Jan Sangh and one-time member of the Union Cabinet, Shyama Prasad Mookerjee was a staunch supporter of the Praja Parishad, a party formed to support Jammu Hindus. He organised protest marches while trying to force Jawaharlal Nehru into coming to a solution for the Jammu-Kashmir issue on communal lines. He died in Srinagar jail on June 22 of a heart attack and his death sparked off anger in Delhi and Jammu. Nehru wrote to a friend in Madras that "we are having a great deal of trouble as a result of Dr Mookherjee's death. The atmosphere in Delhi is bad. It is worse in Calcutta." The popular movement led by him planted the seed of independence in Sheikh Abdullah's mind, says historian Ramachandra Guha.
