

GUNGI GUDIYA, HE SAID

HT LIBRARY

Ram Manohar Lohia

Opposition stalwarts Minoo Masani, J.B. Kripalani and Ram Manohar Lohia entered Parliament in 1963 when the Congress was defeated in a series of important by-elections. Earlier Lohia, a prolific writer and doctorate from Berlin, had created a stir, publishing a pamphlet, 25,000 Rupees a Day, which he said was the amount spent on prime minister Jawaharlal Nehru, while most Indians lived on 3 annas a day. A fierce critic of the Nehru-Gandhi dynasty—he called Indira Gandhi gungi gudiya in 1967—he also acknowledged the centrality of caste in Indian politics, rejecting Marxism as much as capitalism.
