ORPHANED: Indira Gandhi and the nation mourn Nehru's death

END OF AN ERA

The Nehru era has come to an end, announced The Indian Express. Jawaharlal Nehru's death was announced in All India Radio's 2 p.m. bulletin, and though Gulzarilal Nanda was sworn in as successor, the power struggle had begun. When asked once what his legacy to India would be, Nehru had said, "Hopefully, it is 400 million people capable of governing themselves". Nehru's personality was reflected in the nation he governed. As biographer Geoffrey Tyson said, "If Nehru had been a different kind of man, India would have been a different kind of country."
