Career Wisdom

Smart Employers Are Age-Neutral

Some smart employers are making their workplaces age-neutral with respect to their policies and benefits to attract and keep older workers. What does age-neutral mean? All opportunities and rules apply to all employees, regardless of how old or young they are.

Why is this so important? Forward-thinking employers know the workforce will soon face labour shortages:

These employers use creative recruiting to find qualified employees of all ages. They hire, evaluate and promote employees in age-neutral ways. And they train managers, supervisors and workers on how to benefit from age diversity.

Clues to Look For

If you're wondering how age-neutral a current or potential employer might be, look for these clues to find the best employers for workers over 50:

Recruiting

- Job ads mention maturity, good judgment and work experience.
- Ads appeal to workers of many ages.

Training

- New-skill training is offered to workers of all ages.
- Different kinds of skill training are available: classroom, individualized, mentoring, and coaching and job rotation.

Health Benefits

- In addition to health benefits that include prescription drugs, employer offers extras like long-term-care insurance and short- and long-term disability insurance.
- Wellness is emphasized with health screenings, fitness programs and special classes.
