

your week ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

music festival Institutional Strains

DELHI: Hindustani classical music was once the preserve of some exclusive musical families which were more commonly called the gharanas. The ustad and the pandits decided who to teach under a guru-shishya parampara and handpicked disciples to carry the tradition of their gharana forward. Musicologist and vocalist Vishnu Digambar Paluskar did pioneering work in the field of ending the monopoly of gurus and gharanas by setting up a music school—Gandharva Vidyalaya. Every year the school organises Vishnu Digambar Jayanti—a festival in memory of his contributions. This year the festival will begin with a vocal recital by Ranjini Ramachandran, followed by Kushal Das' sitar recital. The second day will have a Carnatic vocal recital by T.M. Krishna, whose music is steeped in bhakti. Venkatesh Kumar carries forward the tradition of Dharwar which has produced vocalists like Pandit Mallikarjun Mansur and Gangubai Hangal. Kumar's voice is pure, unaffected and effortless. On the third day, sarangi will come alive in the hands of a young Murad Ali who truly makes the instrument sing. This will be followed by a vocal recital by Malini Rajurkar from the Gwalior gharana. The final evening will feature vocalist Shounak Abhisheki and flute maestro Pandit Hari Prasad Chaurasia. Abhisheki is the son and disciple of maestro Pandit Jitendra Abhisheki. His style is an amalgamation of Agra and Jaipur gharanas. From August 17-19. At Kamani Auditorium. On August 20, Pandit Chatur Lal Memorial Society has organised a musical tribute to the unknown soldiers. The concert will feature Chaurasia and a unique combined recital which will have Odissi dancer Sonal Mansingh dancing to the music of Ajay Pohankar (vocal) and Abhijit Pohankar (keyboards). At Sri Fort Auditorium.

UNSHACKLED: Ajay Pohankar (left) and Ali

by S. Sahaya Ranjit

art Hyderabad Highs

MUMBAI Digging deep into their cultural roots and drawing inspiration from them to create an art in their own contemporary idiom, is what artists from Hyderabad are doing this season. 'High on Hyderabad' is a collection of paintings and sculptures by Bairu Raghuram, Srinivasa Chari K, Fawad Tamkanat, Srinivas Reddy, Laman Aelay, Ramesh Gorjala and Sachin Jaltare. From the depiction of rural Telangana in Raghuram's work, egg tempera on board in Chari's and bronze sculptures by Reddy, one gets to see a collection that is highly eclectic in style and yet, is unified in the artists' central theme—Hyderabad. For curator Pravina Mecklai, the collection of paintings is a heady mix of the old and the new, of the inimitable style of the artists and of the unusual and wondrous works of art that they have created. The collection of paintings and sculptures by these artists is available for viewing at the Jamaat Art Gallery. On till September 10.

by Swati Mathur

Paintings at the exhibition

festival Colourful Splash

DELHI The Monsoon Festival starting August 17 is all set to showcase varied interpretations and narrations of the season—from classical to contemporary. This would be carried out in a variety of art forms, including visual, fashion, music, theatre, dance and poetry.

So while Max Mueller Bhavan will host a photo

A work by Rajendra Kapse exhibition, Monsoon Light, the British Council will see a special exhibition, focusing on fashion, design and accessories. On till August 22.