

GRAM VIKAS CHAUPAL

A New Chapter Of Participatory Rural Development In Rajasthan

To ensure wider outreach, Gram Vikas Chaupals were organized across eight districts of Rajasthan

Date	Location
6 May	▶ Bambori, Pratapgarh
7 May	▶ Jajod, Sikar
10 May	▶ Kdial, Ajmer
13 May	▶ Panseri, Jalore
16 May	▶ Thikriya, Jaipur
20 May	▶ Chudada, Banswara
21 May	▶ Ghambola, Dungarpur
05 June	▶ Lamba, Bhilwara

At each location, extensive discussions were held regarding local development priorities, infrastructure requirements, and public welfare initiatives. These interactions transformed the Chaupal into a powerful instrument of grassroots democracy and community engagement.

Connecting with Children, Women and Senior Citizens

During the interactions, the Chief Minister spent considerable time engaging with children and reviewing the condition of village schools and Anganwadi centres. On one occasion, schoolgirls informed that their Government Senior Secondary School lacked a Science stream. Taking immediate cognizance of the issue, directed officials to act promptly, resulting in the Science stream being introduced in the school from the very next day. This reflected the initiative's focus on responsive governance and addressing local needs on the ground.

Ground-Level Review of Development Projects

Gram Vikas Chaupal also served as a mechanism for monitoring the implementation of development programs. During village visits, progress reports were sought from concerned officials. Officials were directed to ensure timely implementation and maintain accountability in project execution. Local development challenges were identified and addressed through on-the-spot discussions.

People-Centric Governance: Every Voice Matters Immediate Solutions and Responsive Administration

One of the most impactful outcomes of Gram Vikas Chaupal was the on-the-spot resolution of public grievances. Complaints raised by villagers were addressed immediately. A woman requested the transfer of her husband to a location closer to home due to their child's special medical needs. Acting on the Chief Minister's directions, the transfer order was issued within a few hours.

Public Participation: The Key to Sustainable Development

Villagers were encouraged not only to raise concerns but also to contribute ideas and suggestions for future planning. Through the Gram Vikas Chaupal, the government created a platform for direct dialogue, ensuring that local voices played a meaningful role in shaping development priorities.
