

FASHION IN A FIX

Even as a few designers kept the fashion boat afloat, low business buzz and uninspired collections stopped spring-summer mid-step

■ By Kimi Dangor

The Big Apple took an enormous bite out of the fashion extravaganza touted as the country's premier fashion trade event. As the 10th edition of the Wills Lifestyle India Fashion Week (WIFW) ended, there was no denying that the New York Fashion Week had taken some of the wonder out of the wear on display here. While dithering designers were disappointed with the absence of key international buyers, the few foreign clients who did turn up were let down by the long list of credible couture names who were missing-in-action. "It's like Haryana playing Australia in cricket," sniggered one Delhi designer.

For a week that started with whippers of Pragati Maidan being too downmarket, it sure ended with a bang. Presenting the finale—a tribute to mentor Rohit Khosla—Rohit Bal pulled all the stops with his flair for drama. Models in Bal's fabulous pewter-powered and blue-washed collection

HOMAGE: Rohit Bal's collection was a tribute to Rohit Khosla

Photographs by HEMANT CHAWLA

FASHION  WILLS LIFESTYLE

