

Skyline Education Group: Developing professionals

A new World has emerged with a new horizon. The Skyline Education Group, which integrates higher learning and the value system with a strong focus on quality, has taken a leap into the future.

Set up a decade ago, in 1996, with a view to providing global and relevant curriculum for the emerging international business sectors.

The group started by offering international business programmes from accredited universities of the UK and USA. These tie-ups fostered a very high standard of curriculum delivery and assessment with discipline. Above all, international programmes lay emphasis on understanding perspectives with strong industry relevance.

In 2002, Skyline was appointed as a Branch Campus of Manipal Academy of Higher Education, a UGC recognised deemed university and as a University Study Centre of Sikkim Manipal University, a UGC recognised state university. It is also an authorised learning centre for IATA and UFTAA travel and tourism courses.

■ Skyline Business School presently has students in both BBA and MBA in marketing, finance, human resource management, international business and tourism. Skyline is already ranked among the top 100 B Schools in India.

■ Skyline Institute of Mass Communication conducts BA and MA in mass communication with specialisations in corporate communication, journalism and advertising.

■ Skyline Institute of Travel & Tourism offers the widest range of Travel & Tourism courses at both under graduate and postgraduate level, ranging from the IATA UFTAA courses to professional Diplomas for 10+2 & graduates in Travel & Tourism.

Besides the Skyline Education group offers, professional part-time and short courses in marketing, finance, international business, management, airlines and travel business management.

Over a period and with the changing economic environment, seamless boundaries and new Technology inputs, Skyline has stayed ahead of other B Schools by continuously introducing new curriculum which include Internet marketing, financial derivatives, compensation management, ECRM, talent management, e-Tourism and more. These are the areas that executives of the new world will find themselves facing as business frontiers expand and cutting-edge specialists are increasingly in need.

Teaching Methodology

Praveen Puri, Director, Skyline Business School has headed the institute since inception. As Vice President, Marketing and Brand Manager with the Times of India Group before this, he brings with him the advantage of experience and corporate sense. "We follow a five tiered approach to learning here. It results in superior cognition," he reveals. This approach can be summarised as student – faculty interaction, student – student interaction (teamwork for field projects), student – corporate interface (develops the art of networking), student – Internet interaction (1500 full-text journals available online) and finally, student – books interaction (self-study). This approach creates a fortress of knowledge, assimilation and application.

Training

"We're becoming more and more networked and interdependent. We find ourselves part of virtual teams," says Mr. Puri. As a necessity in contemporary times, the Institute lays stress on developing soft skills. Students must necessarily conform to working in teams, have ability to cope with stressful work environments while developing the
