National rankings are derived from a combination of perceptual and factual scores. Colleges that did not provide factual information were not ranked.

New York or London to mission-minded voluntary groups like the Alternative Law Forum in Bangalore which is mostly staffed by NLSIU products who are doing their bit to help Bangalore City Corporation sweepers get better wages.

Regular exchange programmes for the students have also upped the academic ante. The NLSDebate is one of South Asia's largest parliamentary-style debate tournaments. Students are trained to take part in major competitions, including the World Universities Debating Championship, where it reached the finals in 2002 and in 2007. The school has fared well in the All-Asians Debating Championships as well.

The NLSIU moot team was the only Indian team to have won the Philip C. Jessup International Law Moot Court Competition in 1999. The debating prowess of the students has taken them to the UN High Commission for Refugees and the Commonwealth Human Rights Initiative. Many of its students are on the law faculties of the London School of Economics and consulting firms like McKinsey.

Every year for the past 11 years, at least one NLSIU student has been getting the world's oldest and the most prestigious scholarship instituted by the Sir Herbert Baker-designed Rhodes House in Oxford. Over the years some of other prestigious scholarships won by NLSIU students are Inlaks, Erasmus Mundus and the Radhakrishnan scholarship.

There is, however, a flip side. Most of the graduates, rued a former NLSIU director, preferred the highly lucrative corporate litigation route though one of the key objectives in setting up the school was to send them to Indian courts and help raise the quality of the bar. One of Bangalore's top legal eagles, Navkesh Batra says, "In a global
