National rankings are derived from a combination of perceptual and factual scores. Colleges that did not provide factual information were not ranked.

Muyilir. With unflinching focus on research, this 117-year-old institution has been doing exemplary research in stem cells. Equally important is its curriculum that caters to the most relevant requirements of the country. Muyilir explains, "Our students work in mission hospitals across the country. This hands-on experience is really what sets us apart."

Fourth ranker JIPMER, started as Dhanvantari Medical College in 1956, has set many milestones in the past five decades. It is the only Central Government institution in south India that conducts the B.Sc. (Nursing) course. It treats on an average 5,000 patients every day. This academic year, JIPMER students and faculty won 20 national scholarships for their outstanding academic achievements. A computer lab with 30 terminals and a facility for viewing 800 online journals was this year's addition to its ever-expanding infrastructure. Despite the odds of a small town, the college has designs for the future. As director K.S.V.K. Subbarao says, "Ride on! Rough shod if need be, smooth shod if that will do. But ride on! Ride on over all obstacles and win the race."

Moving up two places from last year is the Kasturba Medical College (KMC). Set up in 1953 in Manipal, its degree is recognised by the General Medical Council of Great Britain and the Malaysian Medical Council. Students from nearly 50 countries have honed their medical skills at KMC over the past few decades, making it one of the top knowledge exporters in the field.

Spread over 200 acres, the college has a library that is one of the largest in Karnataka; not to mention the anatomy museum, one of the largest in the world. For clinical research, KMC also has joint ventures with leading labs like Ranbaxy.

Maintaining its position at number five is Delhi's Lady Hardinge Medical College (LHMC). As old as the World War I, this institution for women professionals was set up at a time when feminism was just about gaining higher ground around the world. Even today, the college admits only female students at the undergraduate level and both men and women at the post-graduate level. The Kalawati Saran Children's Hospital (KSCCH) set up with Japanese collaboration, is the largest neo-natal wing in Delhi and is poised to play a pivotal role in healthcare. The college is actively engaged in projects sponsored by the World Health Organisation, the Indian Council of Medical Research and the University Grants Commission.
