What do businessmen do when they cash in on the ventures they painstakingly built over the years? Start all over again like Atul Shah, Rajeev Chandrasekhar and Tushar Jani have done.

ON SALE NOW

Clockwise: Anchor's Atul Shah, Blue Dart's former Chairman Tushar Jani, and Jupiter Capital's Rajeev Chandrasekhar

Rajeev Chandrasekhar built BPL Mobile, from scratch to a company worth close to a billion dollars. Tushar Jani did likewise with Blue Dart, as did Atul Shah with his Anchor electrical empire. They, and Narottam Sekhsaria of Gujarat Ambuja, Hemendra Kothari of DSP Merrill Lynch, Sidharth Birla of Mysore Cements are among the entrepreneurs who have cashed out of their flagships, only to start all over again. But this time, they're all looking at opportunities in India's sunrise sectors. Business Today, India's No. 1 business magazine, brings you the details.

PLUS: The Debate Over H-1B Visas • Can the New Air India Fly? • Special Report on the Insurance Industry.
