

Q&A MOON MOON SEN

MOON SHINE

She was the original Bengali bombshell. Moon Moon Sen's daughters Raima and Riya might be trying their luck in Bollywood now, but the smouldering

Sen is back to claim her sex-bomb title with Anjan Dutt's Bow Barracks Forever. The film will see Sen playing the role of an "over-sexed" Anglo-Indian lady named Rosy. Sen talks about the rosy times ahead:

Q. What convinced you to do the film?

A. From my best friend to my nanny, I have grown up with Anglo-Indians in Kolkata.

Q. Dutt says the character is unabashedly sexual.

A. It's not so much about sexuality as it is about abject loneliness. She's a lonely person looking for an escape.

Q. Any words of wisdom for wannabe oomph queens?

A. In our time, glamorous girls were labelled vamps. I'm happy today heroines are bombshells and are having all the fun.

Tara Rum Pum

She was the lady with the lisp on the 1990s hit television show Tara and became a household name. Now, a clutchful of forgettable movies later, actor Armita Nangia, 40, is all set to step into the limelight as the reel-life wife of Abdul Karim Telgi in a film called Mudrank. "I've done shows like Jai Mata Di on DD and also the really popular Kaisa Yeh Pyaar Hai on Star Plus. But none of them have been able to match the success of Tara," she concedes. Maybe wishing upon a star might help.

BIG BOTHER

Controversial Channel 4 show Big Brother has found another Indian connection. But accounts executive Nicky Maxwell would much rather deny her desi roots. The 28-year-old from Watford, who was adopted at the age of one from a Mumbai orphanage by Irish and Anglo-Indian parents, was quick to assert that she is "Catholic, not Muslim or Hindu". Bother some, indeed.

Earnest and Young

Her filmography could turn wannabe starlets green with envy. Pragati Tripathi, 12, daughter of a government clerk and school teacher in Chandigarh, has not only featured in Veer Zaara, Nalayak and Dosti, she also has five films up for release in the coming year, including Mummyji, Shortcut, Production No 16, Khushboo and Sajna Ve Sajna. Tripathi says she aspires to be a professional actor, but "not at the cost of studies". "I am excited but still have a long way to go," she signs off. Quite a headstart, this.
