

Tulâh Clinical Wellness, Kozhikode, Kerala

► OVERLOOKING THE WESTERN Ghats from a 30-acre setting in Kozhikode, Tulâh Clinical Wellness brings advanced medicine and traditional healing under one roof. Opened in February 2026 and backed by an estimated $100 million investment from industrialist Faizal Kottikollon, the retreat begins each stay with detailed pre-arrival assessments covering physical, mental and emotional health. The resulting programmes are highly personalised, ranging from four-day health discovery stays to longer oncology recovery, hormonal balance, metabolic detox and longevity plans. Diagnostics can include genomic testing, MRI scans, and cardiovascular profiling. Ayurveda, yoga, Vedanta, Tibetan medicine, and traditional Chinese medicine sit alongside cryotherapy and hyperbaric oxygen therapy. Its standout feature is a vast sound-healing dome (pictured left) designed for immersive restoration.

Price: Starts at $1200 a night per person, plus taxes

Six Senses Vana, Dehradun

► SET WITHIN 21 acres of sal forest at the foothills of Mussoorie, Six Senses Vana makes wellness feel immersive rather than prescriptive. Retreats run from three to 21 nights and can focus on relaxation, better sleep, weight management or other personal goals. Ayurveda, yoga, and Tibetan medicine are combined with therapies such as reflexology, physiotherapy, acupuncture, and raag (melodic framework in Indian classical music) therapy. The schedule is varied, with more than 75 weekly activities spanning nature walks, meditation, pottery, strength training, and badminton. Cultural residencies add another layer. A programme in August, for instance, explores renewal through Bhakti and Sufi poetry, music.

Price: Starts at $780 per night for single occupancy, plus taxes
