

WHAT THEY WANT Seniors appear to be making value-conscious buying decisions when it comes to purchasing homes, as per a research

WHAT SENIORS WANT

- Homes they would like to retire in. Many sell existing houses and look for more senior-friendly neighbourhoods.
- Lifestyle-led rather than investment-led decisions.
- Practical home sizes, affordable price points and well-connected suburban neighbourhoods.

SENIOR HOME SEARCHES

- 46% search for 2 BHK homes, followed by 3 BHKs (24%), and prefer homes that balance comfort with practicality.
- Limited demand for larger 4 BHK homes; growing preference for spaces that are easier to maintain.

CHOICE OF COMMUNITIES

- Many seniors prefer low-rise or mid-rise developments over high-rise towers
- Second or third floor chosen over 20th or 22nd floor.
- In buildings with lifts, easier access, quicker evacuation during emergencies and reduced dependence on elevators

NEIGHBOURHOOD MATTERS

- Seniors favour developed and established suburbs.
- Prioritise neighbourhoods with proven civic infrastructure, healthcare access, public transport, everyday conveniences and established communities over speculative locations.

NEIGHBOURHOOD INFRASTRUCTURE

- Landscaped parks, walking tracks, seating areas and green spaces that support an active lifestyle gain traction.
- Locations where grocery stores, pharmacies, clinics and banks are short commutes, reducing the need for frequent vehicle travel.

to the economics of a real estate project. "Once the community is operational, there is a continuous requirement to manage the services and day-to-day operations effectively," he says.

"While development economics are similar to residential real estate, the operating platform takes time to mature and benefits significantly from scale and occupancy," says Badruka of Amaya.

Anantharam Varayur, co-founder of Manasum, says that as of now, "the services portion is still either bleeding or sometimes at breakeven. Profitability comes once you scale up and start managing a large number of units".

THE COST OF IT

NoBroker research shows that people appear to be making value-conscious buying decisions when it comes to senior homes. "Nearly 67% of searches are for homes priced at ₹1 crore or below, with the highest concentration in the ₹50 lakh-80 lakh and ₹80 lakh-1 crore segments," says Saurabh Garg, Co-founder and chief business officer of NoBroker.

The market is already beginning to span a wide price spectrum, from relatively mass-market retirement communities to ultra-luxury projects.

"Our first senior-living development, Elements at Hiranandani Parks, Oragadam, Chennai, is being developed across approximately 4.5 acres, with a development potential of around 1 million sq. ft," says Niranjan Hiranandani, co-founder and Managing Director, Hiranandani Group.

"The project comprises 400 residences across two phases, planned
