

Nandhiji on the Power of Conscious Leadership in Business

In a world dominated by algorithms, can profit and purpose co-exist? It can if business leaders adopt the two-pronged strategy of service and leadership by establishing initiatives centered around consciousness, says Adhipen Bose Nandhiji.

Speaking at the India@100 event in New Delhi, US-based Nandhiji, a consciousness-based leadership advocate said when consciousness expands, humanity too evolves.

Nandhiji has established a pioneering digital platform CNESS that integrates technology with conscious leadership and community building, the declaration of consciousness movement, an initiative promoting compassion, awareness, human dignity and World Yogi Day, a global celebration of meditation and yogic wisdom.

His company aims to create a Consciousness Infrastructure designed for the next evolution of human systems. This digital ecosystem will combine social media, wellness, and e-commerce. Speaking on conscious leadership and ever-evolving business practices, Nandhiji noted that the one with the most expanded consciousness becomes a natural leader. He pointed out that realities are created from consciousness leading to transformation within the mind.

"We have been going through a lot of crises and challenges, and they have been transformed to being an opportunity thanks to that yogic leadership and this yogic leadership is within each one of us," he said.

Elaborating on the consciousness-based leadership, Nandhiji noted that the moment consciousness comes into the business arena, it amplifies actions. For instance, when we talk about conscious leadership, its traces can be found in customer-client relationships and even community service.
