INDIA'S JOURNEY TO 2047 is being shaped across factory floors, industrial clusters, boardrooms and policy corridors. At the fifth edition of Business Today's India@100 event held in New Delhi on August 21, the conversation moved to the choices that will determine whether India can become a developed, globally competitive economy. With India's Manufacturing Champions as its central theme, the platform brought policymakers, business leaders, entrepreneurs, investors and innovators to examine what it will take to build scale, create jobs, deepen supply chains and compete for a larger share of global manufacturing. From manufacturing and infrastructure to technology, energy, space and leadership, the discussions offered a view of the forces shaping India's next phase of growth and deliberated on the risks, reforms, and capabilities that will define the road to Viksit Bharat. BT
