

Super Achievers

ARUNDHATI BHATTACHARYA

CHAIRPERSON & CEO,
SALESFORCE INDIA & SOUTH ASIA

There are few household names in India's financial sector, and Arundhati Bhattacharya is certainly one among them. After more than four decades at the country's largest lender, the State Bank of India, and a pioneering four-year tenure as its first woman Chair, Bhattacharya decided to take a very different path. She took charge of Salesforce India in 2020, leading the global CRM giant's expansion in the country. Such has been the Padma Shri awardee's leadership that this February she was elevated as the CEO and Chairperson for Salesforce India & South Asia.

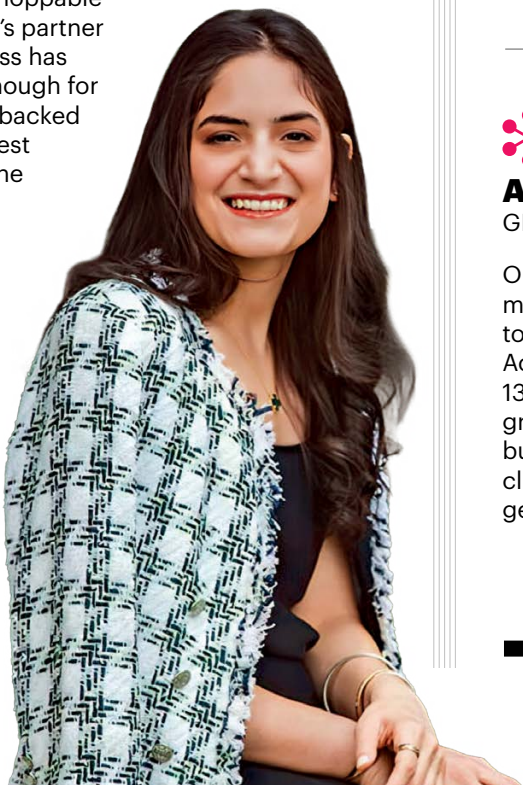

PHOTO BY MANDAR DEODHAR

ASHNA RUIA

FOUNDER, LEHLAH

Columbia University graduate Ashna Ruia spotted a big gap in today's influencer fuelled consumption. People are shown products that they aspire to buy, but often find it difficult to do so. Thus was born LehlLah, a consumer-focused fashion tech app that Ruia launched in 2022. The app helps creators post their curated looks and tag every product with shoppable links to LehlLah's partner brands. Business has been robust enough for Nithin Kamath backed Gruhas to invest ₹12.5 crore in the three-year-old venture.

ARUNDHATI CHAKRABORTY

GROUP CEO, ACCENTURE OPERATIONS

Orchestrating complex transformations and managing large-scale global teams come easy to Arundhati Chakraborty, the Group CEO of Accenture Operations. Having spent close to 13 years with the firm, she is responsible for growing the company's $10-billion operations business and bringing innovation to the firm's clients, tapping vast opportunities created with generative AI and automation.