

ANJALI SUD

CEO, TUBI

For Indian-origin Anjali Sud, the CEO of Fox Corp's free ad-supported streaming app Tubi, the focus is very clearly on providing young consumers content that meets their unique needs. She has overseen rapid growth since taking over the job a little more than a year ago. Her focus appears to be paying off. Earlier this year, Tubi surpassed 1 billion hours watched a month and $1 billion in annual revenue. In the past four months, it has added 10,000 creator-driven stories to its platform, working with some of the most popular creators.

PHOTO BY GETTY IMAGES

ANUPRIYA ACHARYA

CEO, PUBLICIS GROUPE SOUTH ASIA

As CEO of the Publicis Groupe in South Asia, Anupriya Acharya's responsibility cuts across markets and functions. She oversees the operations of Starcom, Zenith, Leo Burnett, BBH, Saatchi & Saatchi, to name but a few. She has completed six years in the current assignment after stints at Group M, TME, Aegis, and Mindshare. In today's rapidly changing world of technology and artificial intelligence (AI), that's an interesting role to have and a hugely challenging one at that. For her, all that experience is coming in handy.

PHOTO BY MANDAR DEODHAR

ANURADHA S. PRAKASH

PROJECT DIRECTOR, SAMOOHA SATELLITE CONSTELLATION, URSC-ISRO

With a career spanning more than three decades at the Indian Space Research Organisation (ISRO), Anuradha S. Prakash has seen the organisation reach for the stars and beyond. She has been involved in satellite operations, mission readiness and systems management. Thanks to her deep expertise and sheer perseverance, Prakash has become the Project Director for the Samootha satellite constellation programme at the UR Rao Satellite Centre. A team builder, she fits in capacity-building efforts in the organisation in whatever time she can spare.

