

L&T'S BUSINESSES

INFRASTRUCTURE PROJECTS

- Buildings and factories
- Heavy civil
- Water
- Power T&D
- Renewables
- Transportation infra
- Minerals and metals

ENERGY PROJECTS

- Hydrocarbon
- Carbonlite solutions
- Clean energy

HI-TECH MANUFACTURING

- Heavy engineering
- Precision engineering
- Systems
- Electrolyser manufacturing

IT & TECH SERVICES

- LTIMindtree
- LTTS
- Digital platforms
- Data centres
- Semiconductor design

FINANCIAL SERVICES

- Retail lending
- Wholesale lending

DEVELOPMENT PROJECTS

- Hyderabad Metro
- Green energy

OTHERS

- Realty
- Construction equipment, industrial product design & development
- Smart world and communications

Source Investor presentation

THE BREAK-UP

118 |

45% INFRASTRUCTURE
33% ENERGY
16% SERVICES
2% HI-TECH MANUFACTURING
4% OTHERS

45% INDIA
33% WEST ASIA
15% US & EUROPE
7% REST OF THE WORLD

Note Order inflows for first nine months of FY26

Source Company presentation

Growth on a large base is anything but easy. But not at L&T. “We are at a reasonable size today and probably the fifth-largest projects company in the free world,” says Subrahmanyam. Prasad, a long-time L&T tracker, says the company sits at the intersection of two themes—physical infrastructure and digital transformation—putting it in a strong position. “Very few companies globally, let alone from India, can credibly claim to lead in both the domains,” he adds.

BITING THE BULLET

When the growth opportunity is compelling, choosing the business where one wants to be requires clarity of thought.

Equally, L&T has taken tough decisions too. “We give it our best shot. If we cannot do it well, maybe someone else can do it better. Sometimes, the theory, grow to sell and shrink to grow, works,” says Subrahmanyam.

L&T’s exits under Subrahmanyam include the electrical and automation business (sold to Schneider Electric), construction equipment (to Pai Machines) and, most recently, Nabha Power (to Torrent Power). During the period, L&T also moved out of hydel power, and transformed the financial services business (exiting mutual fund, wealth management and insurance pieces). The idea is to grow businesses that are more profitable. “When we get out of a business, we find it imperative to think 5-10 years