strategy every three years or so based on industry and business requirements.

“Every two or three years, we do a sort of a strategy workshop. While we keep calibrating every year, broadly, we do a big strategy workshop every three years,” he tells BT.

Welspun Corp is a part of the $5-billion Welspun World. So, just before the Covid-19 pandemic, the company decided to pivot to Welspun 2.0 and expanded its portfolio from just large diameter line pipes, of which it is the largest player globally.

“We said this business is very cyclical in nature, very B2B type of a business, and we have been into it for a long time. It is now time to expand our portfolio,” he recalls, adding this is what led the company to set up a Ductile Iron pipe plant and a steel plant in Anjar, Gujarat. “This helped us increase revenue and bring stability and consistency in our earnings,” he says.

Then, in 2023, the company went back to the drawing board again. “Instead of servicing geographies from one location, you need to be local in those geographies,” Mathur recalls, adding that this was the reason Welspun Corp went to Saudi Arabia and further expanded its footprint in the US.

Second, the company decided to be judicious in capital allocation. “Our core geographies are India, the US, and Saudi Arabia. We will focus only on pipes and these three geographies,” he says. Welspun Corp also decided to prioritise balance sheet management, excellence in execution and customer centricity.

The company’s strong financials reflect its strategies. As on December 31, 2025, it had a consolidated global order book of about ₹23,600 crore. In FY25, it reported
