FOR SHARVIL PATEL, leading Zydus Lifesciences has meant strengthening the company's scientific base while expanding its global presence across healthcare segments.

Patel has focused on building what he describes as a strong innovation engine across businesses with sustained investment in research. "We have consistently invested 7-8% revenues on innovation over the years," says Patel.

Investments support research programmes across new chemical entities (NCEs), biotechnology, vaccines, rare disease therapies, generics and wellness products. "All our businesses are supported by a robust innovation
