IN THE PORTS business, nothing matters more than scale and size. Adani Ports and Special Economic Zone (APSEZ) in many ways confirms that theory.

At a total capacity of 653 million tonnes per annum (mtpa) across 15 ports in India, APSEZ is the largest private port operator. That translates into a 28% market share of overall cargo and 46% of container volumes handled by Indian ports.

Add to that its global ambitions with four international ports scattered across the globe—Haifa in Israel, Colombo West International Terminal in Sri Lanka, Dar es Salaam in Tanzania and North Queensland Export Terminal in Australia—and you get a sense of the scale the company commands.

A Crisil Ratings report from last November points out that APSEZ has consolidated its position at the top, with volumes “growing at a compound annual growth rate of
