» Chadha said both large and specialised NBFCs have an important role to play. He believes smaller NBFCs can succeed by focusing on niche segments such as MSMEs. Such customers often require customised products, which specialised NBFCs are better placed to provide

» Building on that, Roy highlighted the strong growth of NBFCs in recent years. He noted that NBFCs are playing a major role in bringing new borrowers into the formal financial system, with nearly 60-70% of new-to-credit retail customers coming through NBFCs

» Sethia said the future of financial services will depend on three key pillars—deep capital, deep technology, and deep trust. He added that platforms could increasingly shape the sector, allowing institutions to work together and overcome individual risk and capital limitations
