

is there. Hyderabad is centrally located for our country, and you have connectivity from anywhere. So that's why my strength is Hyderabad. Hyderabad's ecosystem, IT, Pharma, AI, skill development and other things, these all are my investments. I have amended investment policies. I have amended the Green Energy Policy. Data centres are the hub for the world and defence investments. Even the government of India has invested much in Hyderabad, Telangana. It's the safest place for defence investments and AI, our ecosystem is there.

(We have) maximum data centres and green energy (infrastructure). These are the focus points. And anyway, AI is there. So, these areas are where we are focussing many investments from Davos. And Davos is the place for learning, not only investments. Some investments will come. So, we are coming here to learn something. If we learn something here, what can we do in our area, how can we do it? Because seeing is believing. We can come here and see everything. I don't look at everything from an investment point of view. It's for experience. If we want to run a state, we need to have some experience.

I want to ask you about the public debt of Telangana, which was around ₹72,000 crore in 2014. Now, it has increased to around ₹6.71 lakh crore. How concerned are you about the rising public indebtedness of Telangana state finances?

That is a problem. In 10 years, KCR (K Chandrashekar Rao, former chief minister) in 70 years has borrowed ₹70,000 crore. Then in 10 years, along with his son, borrowed ₹7 lakh crore from the bank. That too, 11.5% rate of interest. They are not responsible. We are doing debt restructuring responsibly. Wherever there is a way to generate revenue, we will do it. Be it commercial tax, excise, or through registrations. We will also work towards getting what is due to us from the Centre through centrally sponsored schemes.

There is a problem. We will solve the problem. We will try to improve Telangana in the coming two years.

Is the government supporting you?

It must. I am forcing Modi ji (Prime Minister Narendra Modi) BT
