or teleconsultations, a trend that wasn't prevalent a few years ago," explains the celebrity astrologer and motivational speaker.

Madaan says technology has made astrology accessible beyond local experts.

FAITH IN THE STARS

India has always had an abiding faith in the stars, and the trust in astrology has remained resilient in present times. However, now there is lesser reliance on family astrologers and local pandits; astrology has donned a tech-savvy avatar, evolving into astrotech—an obvious derivation of the terms astrology and technology.

Astroyogi has been around since 2001 and has transited from being one of the first automated kundli (horoscope) generators to a full-fledged global platform.

"We launched our mobile app in 2017 and now serve a user base of 30 million globally," says Meena Kapoor, founder of Astroyogi.

AstroSage, which officially started in 2001 and is one of the most widely used platforms for online kundli generation, revamped itself as AstroSage AI in 2024 to leverage tech and launched AI Avatars, basically AI astrologers.

Gupta of Astrotalk is so bullish about astrotech's prospects that he is already planning an initial public offering in 2026-27.

BUSINESS MODEL

India's growing faith market is worth as much as $7 billion. According to RedSeer Strategy Consultants, astrology is leading the charge, with astrotech alone projected to become a $1 billion opportunity by the end of FY25.

Astrotech apps offer a wide range of services tailored to their target market, including tarot card readings, vastu consultation (advice on house layout and construction), Vedic astrology, matchmaking, horoscope readings, and more.

The revenue model is simple: customers are charged on a minutes basis (mostly) for consultation. Rates typically range around ₹12-15 per minute, climbing to ₹200 or more for celebrity astrologers. Firms say a major portion of revenue is
