

led to an increase in demand for easy access of dermatological products. From direct-to-consumer brands to established players, everyone is looking to take a bite into the pie. Glenmark is leveraging its prescription portfolio, particularly in areas such as respiratory, dermatology, and pain management, to build its OTC offerings. Recent product launches in the La Shield range, which includes a sports-specific sunscreen, and Scalpe+ Anti-Dandruff Shampoo, are examples of the company's efforts to cater to changing consumer needs. "These launches enhance our presence in the consumer health space," Malik says.

The increasing popularity of personal care products is not limited to urban areas alone. "Companies say that there are significant opportunities in smaller markets across Tier II and Tier III cities, where significant opportunities lie," says Achin Gupta, Global Chief Operating Officer at Cipla Limited. He adds that the company is tapping into the increasing consumer demand for self-care and preventive health solutions through targeted launches like its skincare brand Rivela Dermascience and WHO-approved oral rehydration salt formulation Prolyte ORS.

FITNESS AND NUTRITION

Companies like Cipla, Mankind Pharma, and Zydus Lifesciences are the leading players in India's consumer healthcare and OTC markets. "Their wide network presence, led by a large field force and successful brand recognition among medical professionals and patients, have helped them grow in the consumer and OTC segments," Tausif Shaikh, India Analyst in Pharma and Healthcare at BNP Paribas, says.

Apart from skincare, another area where there is increased consumer interest is nutrition and fitness. Post Covid-19, there has been a rise in awareness about leading a healthy lifestyle. Internet and social media have made it easy to access knowledge sources on micro-nutrients and balanced diets. The focus on physical fitness has also led to an increase in demand for pain relief drugs. Companies are tapping into these categories to cater to the changing needs of consumers.

"LupinLife's commitment to science-backed, consumer-centric solutions is also reflected in brands like Corcium (a coral calcium and D3 supplement), and VimPro (a dietary protein, vitamin and mineral supplement), catering to the rising demand for nutraceuticals and fitness supple-
