CHENNAI-BASED STAR Health and Allied Insurance has a 33% market share in retail health insurance. It has 91% of total health gross written premium (GWP) for retail business, which has grown at a CAGR of 23% over the last 5 years. Anand Roy, its 49-year-old MD and CEO, tells Business Today, about how he plans to triple the insurer's profits to ₹2,500 crore by FY28. Edited excerpts:

What is your strategy for tripling profits over the next four years?

At Star Health, we follow a four-pronged “ABCD” growth strategy:

A is for agency. Star Health has a vast network of 760,000 agents and intends to take it to 1 million agents in the next three years. Currently contributing 80% of the company's business, agency sales continue to be a primary focus especially on increasing insurance penetration in non-metro cities and towns.

B is for bancassurance.

Partnerships with approximately 70 financial institutions, including major public sector banks, housing finance companies, NBFCs and fintech partnerships, offer significant opportunity to reach millions of customers to promote health insurance in all segments of the population. We are privileged to
