

however, witnessed the largest IPO ($29.4 billion) in 2019 when Saudi Aramco—the world's largest integrated oil and gas company—hit the primary market.

Mahavir Lunawat, Group Founder & Managing Director of financial services group Pantomath Financial Services Group, says India's capital market is experiencing unprecedented growth and emerging as a hub for large IPOs, including by multinational companies. "We could have a $10 billion IPO in the near future, much earlier than one would expect," he says.

The country witnessed 266 IPOs in five years till 2024 against 123 in the preceding five years (2015-2019), per data provider primedatabase.com. In 2024, 91 firms raised a record ₹1,59,784 crore through main board IPOs, more than three times the ₹49,436 crore mobilised by 57 IPOs in 2023.

Meanwhile, retail interest has also increased. The average number of IPO applications from retail participants was 1.88 million in 2024 in comparison to 1.32 million in 2023.

POTENTIAL CANDIDATES

If one shortlists candidates for mega IPOs based on analysts' recommendations, a few sectors stand out. Some experts, such as Krishna Appala, Senior Research Analyst of Capitalmind Research, believe a $10-billion IPO may come from a tech giant, with Reliance Jio and Reliance Retail leading the race. "Both operate in high-growth, high-capex sectors."

Neha Agarwal, Managing Director and Head, Equity Capital Markets of JM Financial Institutional Securities, believes that apart from tech, traditional sectors are compelling contenders. As with other tech giants emerging in telecom, e-commerce and digital services, companies can easily command valuations for an issue size of $10 billion based on their user base and innovative business models. Traditional sectors like banking, financial services, insurance and energy have been prominent parts of the country's economy since decades, says Agarwal.

Padiyath of YES Securities concurs with Appala. "India's inaugural $10 billion IPO is likely to originate from
