According to Tracxn, Kacholia's investment of ₹16.9 crore for a 26.7% stake in Smartivity, a provider of AR-based educational toys and kits, has grown to ₹26 crore. Kacholia also owns a 1.1% stake in Everest Fleet, an end-to-end management solution for fleet taxi operators.

Kacholia owns 0.7% of SUN Mobility, which runs a network of swappable battery stations for electric vehicles. Param Capital's Agrawal also own 0.7% of SUN Mobility.

Ace investor Akash Bhansali, whose investment in listed stocks was more than ₹5,500 crore as of May 24, 2024, holds 4.8% in Gurugram-based Monsoon Fintech, an AI-based alternative credit scoring solution for lenders. Tracxn data shows his unrealised return on a post-round cumulative investment of ₹92.50 lakh in the start-up has grown fourfold to ₹3.7 crore.

Then there's Ashish Dhawan, who holds listed shares worth nearly ₹3,650 crore as of May 24 and has backed start-ups such as ACKO. Dhawan has a 1.4% stake in the multi-category digital insurance and claims management solutions firm. “The insurtech space in India is booming. With low insurance penetration in the country and evolving consumer needs, there is a massive opportunity for players to offer tailor-made products,” says ACKO CEO Animesh Das.

Dhawan's holding in Gurugram-based Burger Singh, a restaurant chain serving burgers, was 11.7% as of May 24, 2024. The value of his post-round cumulative investment in Burger Singh has grown from ₹16.90 crore to ₹48.60 crore (unrealised return) and ₹5.30 crore (cumulative realised return).
