

“Working to become a more skill-based organisation”

Tanuj Kapilashrami, Chief Strategy & Talent Officer at Standard Chartered on Gen AI's effect, reskilling, creating a 'human-plus' model, and more

BY ANAND ADHIKARI ● PHOTO BY MILIND SHELTE

FOR STANDARD

CHARTERED, India is not just a very profitable franchise; it is the third-largest contributor to the bank's operating income. It's also where a lot of incubation of innovative ideas happens and these innovations are not just in people's practices, but also with customers, products, and sustainable finance. In an interview with BUSINESS TODAY, 46-year-old Tanuj Kapilashrami, Chief Strategy & Talent Officer at Standard Chartered, says the unique and special aspect of the India franchise lies in its soft power. Edited excerpts:

Does Gen AI have the potential to disrupt the banking industry?

Banking has always been at the forefront of technology, disrupting business and work models. This revolution, especially with Gen AI, is quite special because it democratises access to technology. It allows individuals to augment their

