grow to ₹13 lakh crore by 2030. However, despite the emergence of big brands, more than 60% of the industry is unorganised.

“There are only a handful of national players, and the largest national brand commands only 6-7% of nationwide market share,” Birla said. The jewellery industry contributes 7-8% to India's GDP, creating jobs while developing skills and boosting exports.

“The future looks attractive,” Birla said, “and India's jewellery market is poised for tremendous growth, driven by the fact that wedding jewellery constitutes 55% of the overall market.” The wedding market is estimated to be worth $130 billion, of which jewellery is a big chunk. With over half the population under 25, the “potential for growth is tremendous,” he said. Birla will invest ₹5,000 crore to go national. “This is an unmatched equity infusion... We will be among the Top 3 national jewellery retailers over the next five years and will continue to grow at a 50% CAGR,” he said.

Birla said the group's expertise in consumer retail business will drive the initiative. Aditya Birla Group owns one of the largest retail chains with various fashion and apparel brands, such as Pantaloons, Van Heusen, Allen Solly, and Peter England.

Naveen Trivedi, Senior Vice President at Motilal Oswal, says, “The market is in the consolidation phase, and there will be steep competition among large players with some changing ranks.”

THE LITTLE TOWNS TITAN LIKES

With more than 900 stores across 265 towns, Titan already has the largest retail footprint and is now expanding to newer locations, most of which are in Tier II, III & IV towns. According to Chawla, customers in smaller towns are ready for branded jewellery; they need the physical presence of a brand such as Titan. In FY24, nearly 30% of its jewellery sales came from such towns. Titan aims to have 1,250 stores offering its four key brands by FY27.
