

Centre for Social and Economic Progress (CSEP), this discussion will delve into the evolving landscape of employment in India.

While the nation has made significant strides in reducing poverty since the economic reforms of the 90s, the challenge of providing jobs for its vast population remains daunting. As emerging technologies like AI threaten to disrupt traditional job sectors and the nature of manufacturing shifts, the question arises: what sectors will drive job growth in India? Moreover, with India's working-age population expected to swell to 1.12 billion by 2047, where will the jobs come from? This session will explore these critical issues, examining the role of both the state and central governments in addressing the demand for employment and the strategies needed to ensure that India can harness its demographic dividend rather than be overwhelmed by it.

The Rise of AI: Will India Board the Bus?
