ONDC aims to replicate the success of the Unified Payments Interface (UPI). With ONDC, India will be the first country to integrate micro to small businesses into the digital economy at a low cost, reducing the entry barrier.

And in a short period of time, ONDC has onboarded prominent players like Ola, Meesho, Khojle.com, Domino's, and Namma Yatri, among others, either through the seller or the buyer side.

The platform has now forayed into the fintech space, facilitating fully digital and paperless loans in six minutes. The new offering is integrated with nine buyer applications (also known as lending service providers) and three lenders, marking a significant milestone in its mission to enhance accessibility and efficiency in credit services.

The buyer applications include easypay, Paisabazaar.com, Tata Digital, Invoicepe, CliniQ360, Zyapaar, IndiPe, TyrePlex, and PayNearby. The lenders include Aditya Birla Finance, DMI Finance, and Karnataka Bank. The initial product of this initiative is unsecured credit for both salaried and self-employed individuals.

ONDC's figures show impressive growth. Koshy, in an earlier interaction with BT, had shared that the platform had witnessed about 1,200 transactions in January 2023. But by May that year, transactions had surged to over 1 million a month, and in July 2024, the network recorded approximately
