REVIEW

There's a certain romance to a film camera—the click of the shutter, the whirr of the film advancing, the anticipation of seeing the developed photos. Nikon understands this sentiment and has tried to channel it into the Zf, a full-frame mirrorless camera draped in the garb of their iconic FM2 film SLR.

The Zf looks gorgeous with its chamfered edges, engraved dials, and sleek black finish. The retro looks hide a capable, modern heart. The 24MP full-frame sensor—also used in the Z6 line of mirrorless cameras—delivers excellent image quality, with vibrant colours
