Nivruti Rai, MD & CEO, Invest India

Rai said India has kicked off its global ascent by investing heavily in infrastructure. She added that logistics are crucial for attracting more investments into the country

Despite the bullish view on the Indian investment landscape, Rai acknowledged challenges such as the need for a robust supply chain ecosystem. However, she remained optimistic, saying Invest India aims to bring $1 trillion in foreign direct investments in the country

Ruchir Sharma, Chairman, Rockefeller International

It may not be mathematically possible for India to become a developed country by 2047 with an annual GDP growth rate of 6%, Sharma said

He pointed out that China benefitted from globalisation but it built a huge exports system and also carried out ruthless capitalism and was able to grow at a higher rate

Responding to a question on the Indian stock markets, Sharma said that the classic models are not working for India as of now
