

PHOTO BY GETTY IMAGES

80 | PHOTO BY GETTY IMAGES

IN FRONT OF A MASSIVE BONFIRE

The Dutch love their bonfires and on New Year's Eve, the towns of Scheveningen and Duindrop compete to build the world's largest bonfire. The locals begin to assemble wood a few days ahead of time to prepare for the massive conflagration. Bonfires have been a large part of Icelandic culture since the Middle Ages and are also well-known in Reykjavik. So go ahead, kick off 2024 in front of the world's largest or second-largest bonfire in the Netherlands.

RUNNING A MIDNIGHT RACE

If your New Year resolution is to get more fit, there is no better way to start the year than running a midnight race. The New York Road Runners organise a four-mile run at Central Park on New Year's Eve. There's music and dancing for everyone leading up to the race which kicks off at 11:59 pm and is accompanied by a fireworks show. You will have plenty of company with approximately 4,000 runners and even more spectators, many donning costumes. Or you could run the Shrewsbury Midnight Run in the UK.