> WHAT MAKES IT COOL This unicorn start-up is taking on legacy multibillion dollar MNC players such as SAP and Oracle

tive. “There is so much happening in terms of hiring, new markets, existing clients, operations at different scales—and it’s almost always urgent. You need to switch seamlessly to what is the need of the moment, and that is tough,” says Paleti.

This team has expanded to 1,100-plus employees across 11 offices in Singapore, Malaysia, Thailand, the Philippines, Indonesia,

Dubai, India, North America, the UK and more. The start-up is also scaling up in all markets they are present in. It turned in ₹224 crore revenue from operations in FY23, but like most, it is yet to see profits. Paleti says they know that they have to scale up globally in a way that their processes and operations can sustain the scale. BT

Inspired by a relative’s battle with cancer and the ensuing financial strain, Banerjee envisioned an integrated managed care system to eliminate the burden of hospital bills for every Indian. The name “Even” symbolises their commitment to creating an equitable healthcare landscape. Banerjee emphasises their uniqueness in India, where their innovative approach to primary care sets them apart. Even Healthcare’s managed care model, akin to having a dedicated family doctor, focusses on preventive care, reducing hospitalisation risks and costs. With a growing member base, Even Healthcare aims to make healthcare more accessible and patient-driven. BT
