sified, professionally managed investing accessible to crores of Indians who would otherwise be navigating markets alone, probably poorly.

The question isn't whether you should invest in mutual funds. For most people, the answer is obviously yes. The question is whether you can commit to the process long enough for it to work. Whether you can stay boring when everyone around you is getting excited. Whether you can keep investing when headlines scream danger, and pause your celebration when they scream euphoria.

The revolution in Indian investing isn't about better products or smarter forecasts. It's about ordinary people discovering that an ordinary process, followed long enough, produces extraordinary results. That's the quiet revolution. And it's still just beginning.

There will always be reasons to panic and reasons to gloat. Your plan must be indifferent to both. Pick the process once. Then let the process do its work. That's not fashionable advice. It's repeatable advice. And in investing, repetition compounds far better than fashion ever could.

ONE LAST WORD

You don't need to predict the market to win. You need to refuse fashionable mistakes long enough for boring arithmetic to work in your favour. That arithmetic sits inside your SIP mandate, your rebalancing calendar, your cost discipline, and your refusal to abandon a sensible plan in an unsensible week. If we've done our job on this issue, you'll walk away with a plan you can follow, not a tip you can forward. BT
