

The sisters ascended to the top management at a particularly sensitive time. Real estate was picking up the pieces after the Covid-19 pandemic, which had scarred the industry like many others. When the worst of Covid eventually blew over, property companies struggled with a shortage of construction workers who had deserted urban areas and towns and fled to the hinterland.

Against that backdrop, by all accounts, Brigade hasn't done too badly under Pavitra and Nirupa Shankar. Take Brigade's performance over the last three years. From ₹2,999 crore in FY22, net sales grew 70% to ₹5,074 crore in FY25. Overall sales value of its real estate projects grew 160% to ₹7,800 crore from about ₹3,000 crore. The company's Ebitda (earnings before interest, tax, depreciation and amortisation) margin, an indicator of operating profitability, improved by 12 percentage points, rising from 13% to 25% in the period.

And from a net loss of ₹65 crore in FY22, Brigade swung to a net profit of ₹686 crore last year.

No wonder founder and Group patriarch Jaishankar is a proud father today, having retired at the age of 65 and placed his bets on a pair of untested young women to steer Brigade. "Under the leadership of the new management, the company has strategically navigated the challenges and opportunities within the Indian real estate market," Jaishankar, the Executive Chairman, tells Business Today.

"This strategic realignment ensures that organisations like Brigade remain resilient and adaptive, poised to navigate the complexities of a rapidly changing world," he adds.

EXPANSION

What's perhaps most remarkable is that from being a Bengaluru-centric company, Brigade has ventured into markets elsewhere in the South—to Hyderabad, Chennai, Mysuru, Kochi, and Thiruvananthapuram—and

"Under the leadership of the new management, the company has strategically navigated the challenges and opportunities within the Indian real estate market"

M.R. JAISHANKAR
EXECUTIVE CHAIRMAN,
BRIGADE ENTERPRISES

UNIT ECONOMICS

Higher revenue per unit is boosting Brigade's profitability

NOTE FIGURES IN ₹ CRORE SOURCE COMPANY, MOSL
— AVG RATE/ SQ. FT