

IQBAL KHAN: At the Deal Table of India's Growth Story

Iqbal Khan, a senior and widely respected transactional lawyer, works in a quieter layer of India's journey toward Viksit Bharat: helping strategic capital move into sectors that expand national capacity — digital infrastructure, clean mobility, healthcare, life sciences, manufacturing and consumer institutions.

Ankur Thadani, Partner at TPG and Head of Climate, Asia, says, "Iqbal is a greatly respected counsel in the corporate M&A landscape and our trusted thought partner. He brings a uniquely distinctive approach of legal expertise and deal pragmatism." Madhav Upuluri, General Counsel of TCS, calls him "a legal dynamo whom you would want on your side of the deal table." Chambers' feedback describes him as "equal parts an experienced lawyer and a highly strategic adviser." Together, the comments point to judgment in high-pressure mandates.

Khan focuses on private equity, M&A, cross-border transactions, joint ventures and foreign investment, particularly where regulation, governance, valuation and execution risk intersect.

Khan supports Prime Minister Narendra Modi's Viksit Bharat vision and the economic approach often described as Modinomics: infrastructure-backed growth, digitalisation, manufacturing depth, formalisation and long-term capital formation. His belief is that policy ambition must be matched by execution, governance and patient capital. That commitment also extends beyond deals: Khan serves on the board of the Aga Khan Foundation (India), whose work in livelihoods, early childhood, nutrition, women's empowerment and community institutions complements the Government of India's development priorities.

Khan's deal record maps closely onto that agenda. In digital infrastructure, he has advised on TCS-TPG HyperVault, up to INR 18,000 crore, and Reliance's data-centre platform with Brookfield Infrastructure and Digital Realty/Digital Connexion, with reported India capacity plans including the INR 98,000 crore Vizag cluster. That places him among a small cohort of Indian deal lawyers associated with two landmark data-centre platforms. In clean mobility, he worked on TPG Rise Climate and ADQ's investment in Tata Motors' passenger EV business, INR 7,500 crore at a valuation of up to US$9.1 billion. In healthcare and life sciences, his work spans Quality Care/Aster, over US$5 billion; Biocon Biologics/Viatrix biosimilars, up to US$3.335 billion; and Advent-backed Suven-Cohance, about US$3 billion. His advice to the Poonawalla-Mittal consortium on its Rajasthan Royals acquisition, enterprise value US$1.65 billion, reflects another modern-India theme: institutionalising sports, media and consumer franchises.

Khan's arbitration and disputes exposure also informs his transactional approach. A Fellow of the Singapore Institute of Arbitrators, he has been involved in S&P/BSE and, early in his career, Hexion/Huntsman, a seminal U.S. material adverse effect dispute. Recognition has followed the work without defining it: Chambers rankings for Private Equity and Corporate/M&A, MergerLinks' Top 10 M&A Lawyers in India for FY2024 and FY2025, and recognition by ALB, Legal Era, RSG, IFLR1000 and Asialaw.

Khan's relevance to Viksit Bharat lies in helping sophisticated capital and Indian enterprise meet in sectors central to national development, while keeping the focus on execution, governance and long-term value creation.
