81% of it came from edible oil; 8.8% from food and FMCG and 11.5% from industry essentials like oleochemicals. By 2027, AWL is seeking to earn ₹10,000 crore revenue from the food and FMCG business, says Kanhere. Its profit plunged to ₹148 crore in FY24 before bouncing back to ₹1,266 crore in FY25. In FY26, the profit fell to ₹1,045 crore.

VAST OPPORTUNITY

AWL Agri's food business still has a long way to go before it earns healthy margins. "Food will remain EBITDA-neutral as we are in an investment and growth phase. We are aggressive on pricing. However, the business has turned EBITDA-positive over the last few quarters," says Kanhere.

The opportunity in food and FMCG is vast. While 60-65% of India's edible oil market is now packaged or branded, 90% staples are sold loose. The shift from loose to packaged form is a major growth opportunity, says Kanhere.

"The market that is generated each year in packed staples is big. For a company like AWL, which has brand distribution and manufacturing, it is easy to tap," he adds.

But taking on market leaders in categories such as rice may not be easy. India Gate basmati rice producer KRBL Ltd and Daawat rice maker LT Foods are No.1 and No. 2 in branded rice, respectively. The company is now targeting the export market. "The business model of rice is such that you have to have exports.
