

MAHARASHTRA TOURISM

WHERE SUSTAINABILITY MEETS SCALE

India's most industrially powerful state is rewriting its tourism narrative, and the world is paying attention.

Maharashtra has long been defined by economic muscle. The state contributes nearly 14% of India's GDP, drives a third of the country's foreign direct investment, and hosts its most globally connected city. However, in boardrooms, policy corridors and luxury travel circles, a new conversation is gaining momentum, that Maharashtra is quietly becoming one of Asia's most compelling sustainable tourism destinations.

The numbers tell part of the story. Maharashtra welcomed over 130 million domestic and international tourists in recent years, generating significant economic activity across the hospitality, transport and services sectors. But the state's tourism leadership is no longer content with footfalls alone.

VOICES OF LEADERSHIP

“

"Maharashtra's tourism story is being rewritten on a simple but powerful principle, that we grow by protecting what we have. Environmental preservation, cultural continuity, and community participation are no longer aspirations; they are the foundation of every destination we build and every experience we design. This is tourism with a conscience, and it is Maharashtra's strongest competitive advantage."

Shri. Shambhuraj Desai,
Minister of Tourism, Govt. of Maharashtra

"Our commitment goes beyond building roads and hotels. We are investing in digital visitor management, clean mobility, barrier-free facilities, and last-mile connectivity because a truly world-class destination must be seamless for travellers, efficient for administrators, and resilient for the communities that call it home."

Shri. Sanjay Khandare (IAS)
Additional Chief Secretary, Dept. of Tourism, Govt. of Maharashtra

"Maharashtra is no longer just a destination, it is a philosophy of travel. We are building a tourism ecosystem where every experience creates lasting value for tourists, communities, and the environment. Sustainable tourism is Maharashtra's great growth story, and Maharashtra is already living it."

Shri. Mangesh Joshi (IAS),
Director, Directorate of Tourism, Govt. of Maharashtra,

Maharashtra's tourism canvas stretches far and wide, from the mangrove-fringed shores of Dapoli and Tarkarli along the Konkan coast, to the tiger heartlands of Tadoba-Andhari and Pench, and from the timeless grandeur of Ajanta-Ellora's UNESCO caves to Nashik's rolling vineyards. Coastal ecosystems are being preserved even as visitors arrive in greater numbers. Forest communities lead safaris and run homestays, ensuring revenues stay rooted in the villages that guard these landscapes. UNESCO forts and Buddhist circuits are being sensitively reinterpreted for a new generation of conscious explorers.
