NOT ALL BUSINESS leaders believe in sacrificing work-life balance to build successful companies. For Motilal Oswal, Managing Director and CEO of Motilal Oswal Financial Services (MOFSL), success isn't measured by hours spent at the office. “A 70–90-hour workweek is not sustainable in the long run,” he says.

Oswal—this year's winner of the Wealth Makers award for the BT-PwC India's Best CEOs—champions a more holistic approach to professional growth. Under his leadership, MOFSL became the first in the industry to introduce a switch-off policy, encouraging employees to disconnect after work hours and recharge. “Long-term success is about maintaining balance and preventing burnout,” he says.

His belief in balance is rooted in his journey of building a company from the ground up. The 62-year-old co-founder moved from Rajasthan to Mumbai in 1981 to pursue chartered accountancy, driven by a deep faith in knowledge, discipline, and long-term vision as catalysts for business and personal growth.

Since co-founding MOFSL with Raamdeo Agrawal in 1987, Oswal has transformed it from a traditional brokerage firm into a diversified financial powerhouse, achieving consolidated gross sales of ₹7,067 crore in FY24. The foundation of this remarkable success? A steadfast commitment to what he calls the 4Ts: talent, technology, training, and towers.
