a liquidity deficit, questions have been raised about the role of the cash reserve ratio (CRR).

It has been debated whether the CRR, which mandates banks to hold a portion of their deposits with the Reserve Bank of India, remains relevant in its current form. This issue was the focus of discussion at the summit. Madan Sabnavis, Chief Economist at Bank of Baroda, highlighted a shift in CRR's purpose over time.

With the banking sector subject to stringent liquidity requirements, there is growing concern that the CRR may no longer be the most efficient mechanism for managing liquidity. BT
