What are the surprises that you have for customers to mark Kohler’s legacy of 150 year of successful milestones?

Reflecting on Kohler’s remarkable 150-year journey, I am thrilled to share the surprises we have in store for our valued customers. This milestone year is all about pushing boundaries in design and sustainability. We are introducing a revolutionary home spa concept—a meticulously curated portfolio of bathroom fittings and accessories that redefine luxury and transform daily routines into indulgent experiences. Additionally, our ambitious sustainability initiative aims to conserve 500 million litres of water this year, underscoring our unwavering commitment to environmental stewardship. Beyond these, we will unveil new product lines that marry elegance with enduring functionality, reinforcing Kohler’s leadership in the market. This year, Kohler is set to be more beautiful and bolder than ever.

Could you elaborate on Kohler’s versatility from a geographic and cultural point of view?

Kohler’s global versatility is one of our strongest assets. Our competitive edge stems from a well-structured system and leadership presence across the world. In India, our dedicated Innovation Centre, led by an award-winning design team, creates products tailored to local preferences. This team has already garnered eight global design accolades. Our cutting-edge manufacturing facility in Jhagadia, Gujarat, and an advanced testing laboratory ensure that every Kohler product aligns with the unique demands of Indian consumers. The same integrated approach is mirrored in our US and China operations. To honour India’s rich cultural heritage, we have introduced an India-inspired colour palette with hues like Peacock and Indigo. Collaborations with leading architects further ensure that every Kohler product harmonizes with contemporary global trends, making it a true fusion of global expertise and local sensibilities.

How has the Indian customer matured in the recent decade or two?

The Indian customer has evolved significantly over the past two decades. Homeowners today are more discerning, looking beyond functionality to create spaces that reflect their personality and aesthetic preferences. The rising popularity of powder bathrooms highlights this shift, with standout products like the Kohler Ming Mirror, wherein consumers can choose
