of India. If India becomes the third-largest economy in the world by 2027, it deserves airlines matching the size, scale, and opportunity. IndiGo is determined to be the airline reflecting that growth,” Elbers tells BT, sporting an IndiGo coat pin on his royal blue Nehru Jacket.

IndiGo’s increasing clout is evident from the fact that it will host the 81st International Air Transport Association’s (IATA) Annual General Meeting in New Delhi from June 8 to 10. The meeting is being held in the country after 40 years, says Elbers, adding that it is time to highlight the growth of Indian aviation.

It has been a phenomenal journey for IndiGo, which turned 18 last year. The company has been reporting
