

EDUCATION

Indian students opt for Indian MBA degrees this year

While better-known Canadian universities like British Columbia and Toronto will still be attractive to Indian students, admissions to the smaller and lesser-known business schools may be affected due to larger geopolitical tensions

BY GEORGE SKARIA

► TIGHTER VISA RULES, political pressure on top US universities, and fewer scholarships under the Donald Trump administration have led many Indian students to prefer leading Indian B-schools over US ones. An indication of this is the reportedly lower applications for GMAT this year.

“Student applications for our MBA programme have been at an all-time high. And the conversion of shortlisted candidates to final admissions has been quite encouraging,” says Professor Harvinder Singh, chairperson, admissions, IMT Ghaziabad.

The 2025 admissions to B-schools are ending. Most of

20 |

PHOTO BY HARDIK CHHABRA